Goshow Architects Named Top Design Firm

New York, NY (April 14, 2009) --- New York City architectural and sustainable design firm, Goshow Architects has been recognized by both New York Construction and American Institute for Architects, Long Island chapter, for their work on the 245 Tenth Avenue Condominiums in New York.

Goshow was the Executive Architect and worked with Della Balle Bernheimer Design. The 21-unit condominium development along the High Line in Chelsea was constructed with an innovative steel façade designed to resemble steam rising from the trains that once traversed the neighboring rail tracks.

New York Construction named Goshow Architects as one of the Top Design Firms. Eligible projects were located in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut and substantially completed in the past year. An independent jury of industry experts judged a record 268 nominated projects and awarded projects based on entry criteria including project management and client service, safety, design and functionality.

Goshow's was also recognized for the project with an Archi Award, which provides public recognition for architectural projects of design excellence. Issued by the American Institute for Architects, Long Island chapter, the award is the top honor in its category.

"We design for the future and are founded on the belief that architects have a social responsibility to design healthy and sustainable living and learning environments for all," said Nancy Goshow, Managing Partner of Goshow Architects.

Goshow Architects is a full-service architectural firm dedicated to improving communities through long-term, sustainable design solutions. Their extensive portfolio includes K-12 schools and higher educational facilities, multi-family housing developments, and projects for assorted government agencies, as well as private and not-for-profit developments. Established in 1978, the 40-person practice is a leading proponent of green design.
